

What are cookies and why do we use them?

Cookies are small text files used by websites to make user experience more efficient.

By law, cookies may be stored on your device only when absolutely necessary for the operation of the site. All other types of cookies require your permission.

This website uses different types of cookies. Some are used at the request of external websites that may be used as part of our website.

The following cookies are used to ensure that all features of the website function as designed:

The obligatory cookies make the website functional by providing basic features such as page navigation and access to secure areas of the website. The website does not function properly without these cookies.

Statistical cookies are cookies that we need to monitor site visits in order to improve user experience.

Marketing cookies anonymously collect information about your website visits. The purpose is to serve ads that are relevant and engaging to the individual user.

Types of cookie	Who serves these cookies
Essential website cookies: These cookies are strictly necessary to provide you with services available through our Websites and to use some of its features, such as access to secure areas.	Redocly
Performance and functionality cookies: These cookies are used to enhance the performance and functionality of our Websites but are non-essential to their use. However, without these cookies, certain functionality (like videos) may become unavailable.	Redocly

How do I change my cookie settings?

You can change your cookie preferences at any time by clicking on the 'Cookie' icon. You can then adjust the available sliders to 'On' or 'Off', then clicking 'Save'. You may need to refresh your page for your settings to take effect.

Alternatively, most web browsers allow some control of most cookies through the browser settings. To find out more about cookies, including how to see what cookies have been set, visit www.aboutcookies.org or www.allaboutcookies.org.
